wambo.org is the future of global public health procurement.

The Global Fund is transforming the multi-billion dollar market for public health commodities by building a global platform for the procurement of quality-assured medicines and products. wambo.org establishes an effective, highly automated purchasing process to support sustainable global public health programs.

The platform is projected to realize cumulated net savings of USD$250 million by 2020 for public health organizations, while strengthening market transparency and reducing barriers to market access for all buyers.

Ultimately, wambo.org will evolve into a public good, opening up to governments and users with external sources of funding. As a vehicle for knowledge transfer in procurement and as a driver of value for money, it will support the process of national transition to efficient and sustainable domestic health investment.

What needs to change?

The current health product market presents challenges across all levels and stages of the supply chain and limits the impact that implementers, civil society and donor funding can have on public health programs.

Buyers face a complex market with little transparency and data that is either incomplete or overwhelming. Limited visibility leads to suboptimal purchasing decisions, price volatility and the risk of stock-outs. Heavy administrative burden, numerous manual steps, and layers of intermediary service providers slow down the purchasing process to incur significant delays.
